Which Are You?

There are two kinds of people on earth today; Just two kinds of people, no more. I say:

Not the sinner and saint, for it's well understood

The good are half bad, and the bad are half good.

Not the rich and the poor, for to rate a man's wealth You must first know the state of his conscience and health.

Not the humble and proud, for in life's little span

Who puts on vain airs is not counted a man.

Not the happy and sad, for the swiftly flying years Bring each man his laughter and each man his tears.

Not the two kinds of people on earth I mean Are the people who lift, and the people who lean.

Wherever you go you will find the earth's masses Are always divided in just these two classes.

And, oddly enough, you will find, too, I ween,

There's only one lifter to twenty who lean.

In which class are you? Are you easing the load

Of overtaxed lifters, who toil down the road?

Or are you a leaner, who lets others share

Your portion of labor and worry and care?

At Rock Lick.

Messrs Thomas Proctor Jr. Harry Longmire, Travis Willis and Edwin Spalding are spending the week at Rock Lick. To one of these at least, the hook and line appeal stronger than parties, but wait, say three years and then see.

In March and April the Rock Port Mutual Insurance Companies wrote over one million dollars of insurance on automobiles, buildings, town and farm property against fire, tornadoes, cyclones and hail. Agents wanted in every town in Missouri. Write H. F. Stapel, Secretary, Rock Port, Mo.

Insect Injurers.

T. J. Talbert, Missouri College of Agriculture.

Corn root worms yield best to crop rotation, systematic disinfestation, and fall plowing.

Garden web worms eat alfalfa live and spin webs over them. If your field is badly infested, use the alfalfa and use the alfalfa.

Wire worms injure corn and potatoes most but feed freely on wheat and oats. They thrive best in sod ground and may be controlled by crop rotation, fall plowing, and good cultivation. So may the grub worms.

Grasshoppers damage field and garden crops, and fruit and shade trees. Poison bran mash sowed early in the morning kills them and their eggs may be destroyed by cultivating pastures, meadows, and waste lands late in the fall.

Corn root lice suck the juices from the roots of corn, grasses, and weeds. They depend on colonies of small brown ants for protection and transportation and may be controlled by crop rotation, fall plowing and early spring cultivation to destroy weeds and grasses.

The army worm which eats the leaves of field and garden crops may be trapped in dusty ditches or killed with poison bran mash sowed broadcast late in the evening. Badly infested meadows should be cut at once to save as much of the hay possible.

Hessian fly grubs feed between the leaf sheath and the stalk at the crown and lower joints of the plant. Destroy the "flax seeds" which produce next year's crop by discing and plowing stubble as soon after harvesting as possible. Keep down all volunteer wheat, sow late in the fall and get your neighbors to do the same.

The chinch bug sucks the juices of corn, wheat, sorghums and other plants of the grass family. They may be trapped in dusty ditches if they go from wheat to corn, or in rainy weather an oil or tar barrier may be necessary. If they get to the corn, spray it with soap suds, emulsion, or tobacco solutions. The clump forming grasses by road sides and in waste lands may be burned in late fall and early winter to kill the chinch bugs which collect there for the winter.

The poison bran mash recommended by the Missouri College of Agriculture for the control of many insect pests is made of half a pound of powdered lead arsenate or half a pound of Paris green mixed with ten pounds of wheat bran. Add two gallons of water into which the pulp of two oranges or two lemons has been mixed together with a quart of molasses or syrup. This amount of poison bait is sufficient for sowing broadcast on two or three acres of the field to be protected. The proper use of this mixture in cut-worm time should save about half of the replanting each year.
